Professional Experience

I. August 2013 till present

1) Conceptualised and conducted a Health Communication module for the Patient Navigators undergoing training in Tata Memorial Centre, later extending it to doctors and medical professionals in Indonesia from 2020 till date.

2) Offered communications consultancy on a voluntary basis to non-government organisations doing stellar work on the ground in areas such as drug deaddiction and mental health from 2015 till date.

3) Head (Communications) at the Centre for Digital Financial Inclusion, CDFI where the task was to place the new organisation on the communication map. Brought into being CDFI's website, cdfi.in, set up their social media presence on Facebook, Twitter and Instagram. Started their newsletter, with an exclusive interview with the Finance Minister, Shri Arun Jaitley in the inaugural issue. Organised conferences for the organisation and did public relations for them in 2014-15.

II. October 2008 to July 2013

Designation: Associate Professor, Indian Institute of Mass Communication, IIMC, New Delhi

About the organization: IIMC is the premier Institute in the field of training, teaching and research in mass communication in India. It was established nearly five decades ago and has centres at Dhenkenal, Aizawl, Jammu, Kottayam and Amravati.

A. 2012-13: Course Director & Head, Indian Information Service Department. The Department is primarily responsible for a nine-month long Induction training and sporadic mid-career training of Indian Information Service officers who are selected after a one-year long rigorous Civil Services Exam, CSE. The Indian Information Service is an organized group 'A' service formed to look after information, publicity and media needs of the country and to ensure dissemination of information on policies and programmes of the Central Government to the common people. The core competence required includes thorough knowledge of the information society and technological advancements, as well as continually updated specialized skills set. The training involves theoretical inputs as well as hands-on practical training and requires administrative skills on the part of the Course Director. The course also includes attachment to the Film & Television Institute of India, Pune and other professional attachments.

   Aside from lectures on governance issues, the Ministry of Information & Broadcasting and its media units, the paper on Social Marketing was anchored by me. Over 120 officers were trained during this period which was a record of sorts in terms of numbers.

B. 2010-2012: Was given charge of coordinating the In-service training of Indian Information Service officers, both Group 'A' and Group 'B'. Combining the hands-on and theoretical approaches, the trainees were set a tough exam to clear at the end and asked to conduct field research and go on field attachments before being given their certificates. Two courses were being conducted simultaneously. As and when required, I was also asked to contribute to the other PGD courses as well as Short courses wherein I took lectures on Government Media Systems, Social Marketing and Radio News.

C. Jan 2009-Dec 2009: Course Director & Head, Advertising & Public Relations Department. Conducted the Post Graduate Diploma Program of the Department where students selected through an All-India exam are taught the basics of advertising and public relations. The course has a good industry interface with many stalwarts coming in to teach students, who in turn go on to become heavyweights in the industry. Practical demonstrations coupled with theoretical inputs and sensitivity to the market are important pillars of this course. Aside from coordinating this program which also had administrative aspects, I was also tasked with lectures in other departments as well as in short courses on Advertising, Public Relations and News.

D. Oct 2008-Dec 2008: Was involved in the Department of Advertising & Public Relations as Associate Professor.

E. Special lectures:

Social Media: Spoke during workshops on the subject to senior officers of the Indian Information Service posted in Press Information Bureau on 27-28 Jan 2012, 20-21 April 2012.

Interpersonal Communication: Spoke to officers of the Directorate of Field Publicity on successful case studies relating to use of interpersonal communication for information dissemination by organisations on 24th July 2012.

Innovation in Communication: Spoke at a Seminar on Innovation in Communication: Thinking Out-of-the-Box to retain shrinking audiences, IIMC where industry stalwarts were invited to share their thoughts on innovative practices in the field of communication on 10th Oct 2009.

F. Research Project:

A research project on Evaluative Study of DAVP's Plan Scheme Publicity was conducted under my leadership on behalf of the Ministry of Information & Broadcasting. The project, spread over six States and 1200 respondents, sought to evaluate the impact of the Bharat Nirman communication campaign launched by the Government of India. In the process, it also involved a study on media consumption patterns and in-house working of the Directorate of Advertising & Visual Publicity.

III. June 2005 to Oct 2008

Designation: Director, Directorate of Advertising & Visual Publicity, DAVP

About the organization: DAVP is the multi-media advertising agency of the Government of India. It is tasked with public service messaging across media platforms in public interest.

Assigned to manage the Audio-Visual Department of DAVP. This was one of the most challenging departments in the organization as it was a single-window for all Government of India Ministries & Departments for audio visual content creation, rate fixation for media platforms, media planning, distribution, monitoring, billing and payment. Lack of infrastructure and manpower added to the challenges. As Director (AV), I was the middle-management cog in the wheel and was instrumental in bringing out the first ever rates for television based on a formula which found wide acceptance across media houses. Was responsible for introducing Digital Cinema as one of the new media which could be used by government for publicity purposes.

IV. Aug 2004 to June 2005

Designation: News Editor, Doordarshan News

About the Organization: Doordarshan News is the television arm of the national public broadcaster Prasar Bharati. Among other public service aims, it has the goals of promoting social justice, combat untouchability, safeguard the rights of the working class and promote women's issues.

Was assigned the duties of editing and compiling of national bulletins. This involved aggregation of news inputs from wires, correspondents, editors etc and putting them in a visually stimulating and orderly bulletin. A lot of coordination was required with producers who were responsible for the production values of bulletins. Supervising the quality and output of news packaging editors, assigning duties for interns, keeping a close watch on the tickers-all were part of the duties of a News Editor, especially when assigned as Shift In-charge.

V. June 2003 to Aug 2004

Designation: Editor, Directorate of Publications Division

About the Organisation: The Directorate seeks to publish books and magazines of national importance with the aim of preserving national history and continuity.

Key responsibilities initially included editing of manuscripts for books of national importance. Mother Teresa: Inspiring Incidents, ISBN 9788123011677 was the first book that was edited by me. The prestigious Collected Works of Deen Dayal Upadhyay was another project entrusted to me. Later, I was assigned as Editor, Employment News, the most successful journal of the organization. I was responsible for raising the profile of the weekly with editorials and cartoons on employment issues. Was awarded Prakashan Mitra (Best employee of the year) for my work at the Directorate.

VI. Jan 2001 to June 2003

Designation: Campaign Officer, DAVP

During my first stint at DAVP, I was assigned the Ministries of Human Resource Development (HRD), Rural Development and Ministry of Defence, among others, for their requirements of publicity through mass media. Developed a creative campaign for the HRD Ministry against dowry (Ministry of Women & Child Development had not yet been carved out of HRD) which was much appreciated by the Client Ministry. Also developed creative material for the Food & Nutrition Board for which I received a commendation letter from the Chairman.

VII. Sept 1992 to Jan 2001

Designation: News Editor, All India Radio

About the Organization: All India Radio News has a history going back three-quarters of a century, the organization itself dates before that. As the radio arm of the public broadcaster Prasar Bharati, it takes the task of public service messaging very seriously.

Responsibilities assigned during my tenure at News Services Division, All India Radio involved managing news output going to the West Asian countries, informative bulletins being heard across the country in scheduled languages, the world news desk, the national news desk with bulletins at prime time in Hindi and English, the sports desk etc. Was involved in the overhaul of news presentation started around 1995 in the newsroom. Was also witness to the switchover to computers in the newsroom.

VIII. April 1992 to Sept 1992

Designation: Asstt Information Officer, Press Information Bureau, Kohima, Nagaland

About the Organization: Press Information Bureau serves as the public relations arm of the Government of India. In Kohima, it was a link for the far-flung area to the Centre.

At PIB, Kohima, I was in-charge of a small Information Centre too which housed a few books and magazines. The area was in the grip of insurgency and even the board of the office had been taken down. I was responsible for restoring the board and re-starting the Information Centre where gradually young people started dropping by to go through newspapers and other reading material. I was also responsible for sending feedback from the local press to Central schemes and programs.

IX. Dec 1990 to March 1992

Designation: Officer Trainee, IIMC

During this period, underwent Induction Training at the Indian Institute of Mass Communication, IIMC as a newly-recruited Indian Information Service officer. The training was wide-ranging with theory based class room sessions and practical training too. A number of field attachments were also scheduled. This period also included on the job training with the Media Units of the Ministry of Information & Broadcasting.

X. Aug 1990 to Dec 1990

Designation: Officer Trainee, National Academy of Direct Taxes, NADT, Nagpur

About the Organization: NADT is one of the premier academies identified for training of officers of the Government of India. It conducts the Foundation Course for recruits to the Civil Service along with the Lal Bahadur Shastri National Academy for Administration, Mussoorie and a few other earmarked institutions.

During the Foundation Course training, we were expected to absorb modules on administration, finance, economics, management etc and were groomed to take our places as administrators in the bureaucratic framework.

Educational Qualifications

I. Doctorate in Philosophy, D. Phil.
(1998 to 2002)

Enrolled in a Doctoral Program at the Philosophy Department of Allahabad University in 1998 to pursue which I had to take study leave from All India Radio from Jan 1999 to Jan 2001.The subject was 'Impact of media on society in the light of moral ideals' and the study sought to explore the relationship between radio and television and other mass media on our value and judgment systems. Television was just coming into its own at that moment in time and the exposure to long hours of television programming had triggered the debate on whether children and other audiences were getting inured to violence, profanity and other undesirable social values. The methodology adopted was a critique of studies done so far and an analysis of their findings with respect to ethics and values. It was found that there is a subtle shift in attitudes towards ethical values with prolonged exposure to mass media.

II. Masters in Philosophy
(July 1988 to Aug 1990)

Underwent the Masters Programme in Philosophy at Allahabad University. My interests veered towards ethics and morality and I was also deeply interested in Western Philosophy and Comparative Religion. My name figured in the merit list upon announcement of results.

III. Bachelors in Philosophy, Ancient History and English Literature
(July 1985 to June 1988)

This was a program at the University of Allahabad, Allahabad which gave an insight into the cultural heritage of India and the world. I stood second in the merit list of the University at the end of this three-year program.
